Malcom Kemp recognized as Partner of the Year for Mississippi Children’s Museum

Jackson, Miss. (April 18, 2018) – Malcom Kemp has been a Mississippi Children’s Museum (MCM) Partner for ten years, and his enthusiasm for supporting the work of the museum is just as strong today as it was when he began. “In 2008, our daughter, Sarah Young, became involved in the Children’s Educational Fair of MCM and encouraged my wife Paula and me to join her in supporting our new community,” Malcom says. “We have remained involved since then.” Malcom has stayed true to that spirit, staying active with MCM Partners since the beginning.

MCM Partners are volunteers committed to promoting and financially supporting the work of MCM. Partners plan and host MCM’s signature fundraisers, volunteer during designated museum programs and special events, and increase awareness of MCM throughout Mississippi and the Southeast. Partners make a significant contribution every year in volunteering their time as well as financially supporting the work of the museum.

You can find Malcom at many of MCM’s events, often volunteering but always having a good time talking with children and their families. Over the years, Malcom has read The Giving Tree in the Literacy Garden, played Santa Claus during the holidays, and worked one-on-one with children during MCM’s Read to Succeed camp. For Malcom, the most important part of being a part of MCM is “being around people with the common goal of helping the children of Mississippi.”

His steadfast support of MCM is what makes Malcom such a valuable member of MCM Partners and this year’s recipient of the Preston Myers Hays Award of Light, which recognizes an MCM Partners member each year for their service to the museum.
