Jazmine Harvey has been recognized as an outstanding volunteer at Mississippi Children's Museum (MCM) and has been named "Volunteer of the Month" for February for her positive attitude and dedication.

Harvey, a junior at Jackson State University, has volunteered for over 100 hours in less than a year and stands out because "she is incredibly smart and takes on every task with a smile" according to Sharon Griffin, MCM's Volunteer Coordinator. Jazmine has also been a big help in the Marketing Department, volunteering with the staff for multiple projects. "Having Jazmine volunteer with us in the External Affairs and Marketing Department, knowing she would like to pursue a career in marketing, is a great fit for us. She is able to apply what she is learning in the classroom and in her textbooks to our marketing projects. This can help her stand out among other candidates when she applies for a job in marketing," according to Susan Branson, MCM's Director of External Affairs.

Students who attend Jackson State University are required to complete 120 hours of community service before they graduate. MS Children's Museum is one of the approved sites for students to complete their community service hours, where they can donate their time and talent, working around their class and work schedules, with the goal of making a positive difference at the university and in the community.

When asked why she chose to volunteer at Mississippi Children's Museum, Harvey shared "I decided to do my community service at the Mississippi Children's Museum and have enjoyed every moment of it. I have worked as a volunteer on the floor, working in the different exhibits, teaching and playing with all wonderful families that come. I really enjoyed working with Journey to the North Pole and assisting kids down the huge slide. As a marketing major at school, the museum has allowed me to volunteer with the marketing department, and I am enjoying working with each member of the team. The Mississippi Children's Museum has taught me many things and I love it here!"
